

ALL THE BURDEN GEMS RECOVERED.

Continued from First Page.

locked. Indeed, it was cleaned out by the servants on Wednesday, when the bags were left lying about in the most careless manner.

Their amount of baggage was not unusual, as the men were in the habit of dressing well, and nothing induced the landlord to suspect them of illegal practices.

Nothing was found in Turner's trunks but diamonds. The other jewelry was discovered in the square-mouthed black bag.

History of the Men.

Turner, who belongs to a respectable family, entered Mr. Burden's service on the advice of Dunlop some four years ago. He had been working as a small farmer in Cambridgeshire, leaving that life to enter domestic service. Dunlop, who says he is of Scotch birth, speaks with a strong Irish accent.

Both men have exceptional characters, having, before they went to America, been in the employment of several well-known families in the metropolis.

No other arrests have been made, and none is likely, as the authorities are of the firm opinion that they have secured the right persons.

Arthur Newton, a well-known London Police Court solicitor of great tenacity and experience, has been engaged to defend Turner, whose sister is broken-hearted. Dunlop is not yet represented by counsel.

The fact of the arrest was brought today to the knowledge of the United States Embassy, and steps were immediately taken with reference to extradition.

London is enormously interested in the affair, as a number of jewel robberies have recently occurred here.

THE MEN AND THE THEFT.

Police Suspected Them and Informed Scotland Yard—Mr. Burden's Lawyer Followed Them.

William Roberts Dunlop, butler, and William Turner, under butler, at the time of the robbery in the Burden family, were from England, and enjoyed the trust and confidence of Mr. Burden and all the members of his household. They were familiar with the safes where the jewelry was kept, often had custody of the keys and simply had to abstract the precious jewels when nobody was about.

Dunlop it was who daily received the reporters who called at the house, and it was he who doled out scraps of information with a perfectly placid face and innocent air, suggesting and building up clues as to the actions of the supposed burglars, while it is more than probable he and his companion had the jewels about their persons all the time.

THE SMOOTH THIEVES' DEPARTURE.

When the excitement had somewhat subsided the men separately and for different reasons left the Burden employ of their own volition, and at different dates sailed for their native land.

The police suspected Dunlop and Turner, Mr. Burden had intended following them up personally, but certain exigencies arising, he had remained at home, intrusting his delicate mission to a friend, Lawyer Buchanan Whitworth, of No. 44 Pine street, who arrived in London on Wednesday. It is noticeable that the arrests took place the following day, and the first information received by Mr. Burden was a cablegram yesterday morning, containing these words: Dunlop arrested with diamonds.

BUCHANAN WHITWORTH.

A few minutes after Mr. Burden received the following cablegram from his London bankers, J. L. Morgan & Co.: Police arrested two thieves with entire amount of your jewelry in their possession. It is essential that you should come immediately to identify men. Remanded for eight days. Cable when you sail. Reward claimed by the London police.

On Thursday Mr. Burden and Chief O'Brien had absolutely denied that there was any truth in the rumor that the two servants were suspected of the theft, but as soon as the news arrived they were prepared to admit the whole story, and anxious that it should be understood that they had instigated the arrests.

When Mr. Burden took these two cablegrams to Police Headquarters, yesterday morning, Chief O'Brien had no news from London concerning the men. He immediately cabled to Chief Inspector Strong, of Scotland Yard, asking if Dunlop and Turner were detained for the Burden robbery. The reply came:

Yes, American Embassy has wired for papers.

CAPTAIN O'BRIEN'S STATEMENT.

Chief of the London Bureau O'Brien then made the following statement, detailing his work upon the Burden robbery:

On the night of the robbery—December 27, 1895—Mr. and Mrs. J. Townsend Burden, their daughter Evelyn and their son, J. Townsend, Jr., went to the opera. The only other member of the family, their son William, remained at home. The robbery was reported at the Detective Bureau at 1:25 a. m. Detective-Sergeants Rynders and J. M. O'Brien, proceeded at once to the scene of the robbery, and after a hurried investigation, by my orders they covered the house to see that none of the servants left the premises. On the morning of December 28, Detective-Sergeants McCauley, Evanshoe and Clark went to the Burden household and immediately began a thorough investigation of the robbery.

It was discovered that the butler, William B. Dunlop, had attended the door and remained in the hall waiting on the son William, and the only servant who had left the premises was a William Turner, a second butler. Upon being questioned by the detectives in regard thereto, he (Turner) stated that he had left the house about 9:30 p. m. and returned about 10 o'clock, and that during that period he had went to the drug store of Cassell, Massey & Co., Twenty-fifth street and Broadway, to purchase some quinine. This upon investigation proved to be true. Upon being asked why it should have taken him half an hour to go to Twenty-fifth street and Broadway, he further replied that he took a walk around a block or two to get the air and smoke his pipe. The trunk of every member of the Burden family and of the servants and every nick and corner were searched, and a most careful examination was made in every closet in the kitchen, which caused at the time a good deal of merriment among the servants. Not the slightest trace of the jewelry could be found.

Mrs. Burden's Safe, Out of Which Her Jewels Were Taken.

From the day of the robbery up to the present time Detective-Sergeants McCauley, Evanshoe, Daly, Valley, O'Connell, Fogarty, Meehan and Clark have in turn shadowed the servants every time they left the house until they returned.

The suspects of the detectives were particularly directed to the two butlers, Dunlop and Turner, but during all the period while being shadowed none of the servants were discovered meeting each other on the street or connecting with each other in any manner. On the 28th of December William Turner, the second butler, left the employ of the Burden household and took the steamer to return to England. He left the house in a hansom on that morning. Detective-Sergeants Evanshoe and Meehan followed him in a cab. He went direct to the foot of Fulton street, North River, and boarded the American Line steamer New York. The detectives waited on the pier until the steamer left her moorings without seeing any other person connect with him.

In the latter part of February the butler, William Roberts Dunlop, gave notice to Mr. Burden that he was going to leave his employ. He told some of the other servants that there had been so many indignities made in regard to his honesty, etc., that he did not intend to remain any longer. He stated that when in Europe in the employ of the Duke of Devonshire, he had the charge of jewelry worth two or three hundred thousand dollars and there had never been any suspicion cast upon his character, and for that reason he intended to leave the Burden household and go back to England.

On March 2 he left the employ of the Burden household, and was shadowed by the detectives to No. 47 East Fifth street, the house of his brother, who is a coachman for Whitehall Field. After remaining there ten days he went to New Haven, Conn., and was shadowed by the detectives, who found that he was visiting another brother, and after remaining four days, he returned to this city and lodged with No. 47 East Fifth street, where he remained until the 25th of March, when he sailed for Europe on the Cunard Line steamer Campania. He took a second cabin passage.

THE INCENTIVE OF REWARD.

Shortly after the robbery, $10,000 reward for information leading to the recovery of the diamonds, or $500 for any information which might lead to their conviction was offered, and this intimation, with circulars describing the jewels, was sent to every chief of police in the world. At my suggestion also, a personal correspondence concerning the matter was kept up with Mr. Burden and his London bankers, J. L. Morgan & Co.

On April 11 I sent the following letter to the Chief Inspector at Scotland Yard, London:

"I beg leave to again call your attention to the diamond robbery committed on December 27, 1895, at the residence of Mr. J. Townsend Burden, No. 5 East Twenty-sixth street, this city, upon which occasion property valued at $40,000 was stolen. From information received from some of the servants there is reason to suspect one William Roberts Dunlop, who was employed by Mr. Burden at the time of the robbery as a butler."

"The stolen goods from this city on the steamship Campania, which sailed on March 28, and is now in your vicinity, would very much help in the event of his disposing of the jewels, if the same have been stolen by him, although at present we have no grounds upon which to warrant his arrest."

DUNLOP'S HIGH REPUTATION.

"He is reported for the position of butler to Mr. Burden when the latter was in England, about July, 1894, and gave as references Lord Ashurst, for whom he was formerly employed as first footman for three years; Lord Londonderry, by whom he was employed as 'match' footman for a period of twelve months; Lord Wolmer, by whom he was employed as first footman and valet for two years, and the Duke of Devonshire, by whom he was employed for six months as first footman."

"None of the references were investigated. Enclosed I send you a copy of a letter from George Wintergill, of No. 28, Prince's Gate, London, S. W., recommending William Roberts Dunlop to Mr. Burden."

"Will you please make confidential inquiries in regard to the said Dunlop, in which you will be assisted by the above references, and let me know at the earliest convenience whether he was employed by the parties named, and if so, their estimate as to his honesty and so forth."

"I expect to learn shortly of his address in your country, and on receiving it will write particulars. When in London he frequents the Hotel de Oaks Club, which I understand, is the headquarters of butlers and waiters."

"This letter, I presume, is still upon its way," continued Captain O'Brien, "as it was mailed upon the 14th, or it is just possible it may have arrived and that the London police acted upon it."

"The facts all go to show that the police were right in their view that the place was not entered from the outside. There is more danger to rich people from those inside their houses than from those who knock at the door. More than the price of these jewels has been spent by an police so this country in following supposed clues and rounding up crooks in the search for the stolen gems, but we suspected the servants all the time. It is possible they were taken out when Turner went for the quinine, or they may have had them on their persons all the time."

"I suppose the London police will be entitled to the reward; but we don't mind that so long as the thieves are caught and the property recovered."

BUTLER DUNLOP'S RELATIVES.

Hugh Dunlop, half-brother of the butler, is Whitehall Reid's coachman. He lives with his family in apartments over Mr. Reid's stables, No. 47 East Fifth street. He said last night:

"When William threw up his place with Mr. Burden he stopped with me until he sailed for England in the Campania. He must have been here ten or fifteen days, but I never noticed him acting strangely, and I never suspected him of being mixed up in that diamond business. When the time came for him to sail I went down to the ship and saw him off. He went second class, and his luggage was made up of a trunk and two traveling bags. The next I heard of him was when I heard about his arrest in London."

"I didn't suspect anything wrong when he left the Burdens. He told me that he had given them warning four times, and I supposed that the man was homesick. I am the only relative he has on this side, and I didn't know that he was over here until three months after his arrival. He got here last May. It was the first time I had seen him in over nine years."

"This will break my father's heart. He has a farm near Dublin. William went into service when he was fifteen. He has been a trunk and a hatter for some of his best-known grooms in London."

John Cairnes, J. Townsend Burden's confidential man of business and private secretary, lives at No. 223 East Thirty-second street. He said:

"I understand that Dunlop divided the time between leaving Mr. Burden's house and sailing in visiting his brother in this city and his married sister. I cannot give you her name, but she is married to a gardener who is employed by a family living near Stamford, Conn. I am not at liberty to give you the full name of Edna, the kitchen maid, who was in the Burden house on the night of the robbery. She was discharged for cause only a few days ago. I don't believe she is still in the city. In my opinion, she had no hand in the robbery, and I don't believe that she has made any confession."

A WARRANT ISSUED FOR THE MEN.

A bench warrant has been issued for the men and they will be indicted. Mr. Burden will leave on Wednesday for Europe and he will be accompanied by Detective-Sergeants McCauley and Evanshoe, who will bring the men back to this city.

The under butler, Henry, who was in the Burden house at the time of the robbery, said that Dunlop and Turner used to talk about the robbery just the same as the others, and although he slept with Turner, he never had any suspicion of the men.

Soon after the robbery Dunlop, while answering inquiries, said that he was in Lord Ashurst's employment when a jewelry robbery occurred, and he did not like being viewed with suspicion on that occasion.

"It is hard," he said, "to be in another man's mess like this again."

The stolen jewels and their values were given as follows:

Diamond necklace.....$30,000
Diamond bracelet.....2,000
Three diamond rings.....2,000
Emerald and diamond ring.....2,000
Black pearl, set with diamonds.....2,000
Three diamond bracelets.....1,200
One ruby and two diamond rings.....1,000
Sapphire and diamond ring.....1,000
Two turquoise rings.....200
Turquoise necklace.....900
Sapphire pin.....500
Diamond set watch, with diamond bow.....1,400
Gold and sapphire chain.....300
Lady's gold watch, with raised letters.....200
Two diamond bangles.....1,000
Lady's gold watch, with raised letters.....200
Open face gold watch.....300
Pearl chain.....200
Leather purse, containing $500.....300

Total.....$56,780

ONE HUNDRED MILES OF ICE SEEN AT SEA.

Augusta Victoria Passes Within a Mile of an Enormous Floe.

Largest Ever Met on the Line of the Transatlantic Ferry Lane.

STORIES OF THE PASSENGERS.

Bergs Looked Like Cathedrals and Buildings in Every Order of Architecture. Spectators Shivered in the Sunshine.

One of the most extensive ice fields ever sighted from an ocean steamship was seen from the deck of the Hamburg-American liner Augusta Victoria, which reached her Hoboken pier at 10 o'clock last night from Hamburg.

The Augusta Victoria left Hamburg on April 11. It was 6 o'clock last Wednesday morning when the eastern end of the great ice field loomed into view. The steamship was then in latitude 43 degrees 12 minutes north, and longitude 48 degrees 50 minutes west, or something more than 1,200 miles east of Sandy Hook, running at eight knots an hour fully a mile south of the ice floe, which stretched westward for a hundred miles.

To the northward ice appeared as far as the eye could reach, and even with the aid of a glass it was impossible to tell, even approximately, how far north the field extended.

Bergs dotted this great field and they resembled in form every sort of architecture known. Some two miles to the north and surrounded by a great field of ice was seen at 8 a. m. an immense berg, fashioned like a gigantic cathedral. One immense spire, covered with a fretwork of icicles, rose from the centre of the structure to a height of fully 300 feet, while numberless smaller spires clustered around the central shaft.

Other bergs looked like solid business block with square tops and precipitous sides. The temperature had fallen fully 25 degrees, and the passengers on deck wore their warmest wraps, but still shivered in the cold, in spite of the bright sun.

At 10 a. m. the Augusta Victoria passed within 500 yards of a large berg, which floated a little to the south of the field. This berg was seventy-five feet high and 500 feet long. The top was like a vast jagged plateau and a wave of cold air swept over the steamship as she rushed by to the westward.

For six hours the steamship skirted the southern edge of this great ice field, and it was noon before she passed the western edge. Captain Knapp had taken care to keep a distance of nearly a mile to the south most of the time. He thought the field extended fully 100 miles east and west. It was drifting to the southward across the Atlantic steamer lands.

Other bergs looked like solid business block with square tops and precipitous sides. The temperature had fallen fully 25 degrees, and the passengers on deck wore their warmest wraps, but still shivered in the cold, in spite of the bright sun.

At 10 a. m. the Augusta Victoria passed within 500 yards of a large berg, which floated a little to the south of the field. This berg was seventy-five feet high and 500 feet long. The top was like a vast jagged plateau and a wave of cold air swept over the steamship as she rushed by to the westward.

For six hours the steamship skirted the southern edge of this great ice field, and it was noon before she passed the western edge. Captain Knapp had taken care to keep a distance of nearly a mile to the south most of the time. He thought the field extended fully 100 miles east and west. It was drifting to the southward across the Atlantic steamer lands.

Other bergs looked like solid business block with square tops and precipitous sides. The temperature had fallen fully 25 degrees, and the passengers on deck wore their warmest wraps, but still shivered in the cold, in spite of the bright sun.

At 10 a. m. the Augusta Victoria passed within 500 yards of a large berg, which floated a little to the south of the field. This berg was seventy-five feet high and 500 feet long. The top was like a vast jagged plateau and a wave of cold air swept over the steamship as she rushed by to the westward.

For six hours the steamship skirted the southern edge of this great ice field, and it was noon before she passed the western edge. Captain Knapp had taken care to keep a distance of nearly a mile to the south most of the time. He thought the field extended fully 100 miles east and west. It was drifting to the southward across the Atlantic steamer lands.

Other bergs looked like solid business block with square tops and precipitous sides. The temperature had fallen fully 25 degrees, and the passengers on deck wore their warmest wraps, but still shivered in the cold, in spite of the bright sun.

At 10 a. m. the Augusta Victoria passed within 500 yards of a large berg, which floated a little to the south of the field. This berg was seventy-five feet high and 500 feet long. The top was like a vast jagged plateau and a wave of cold air swept over the steamship as she rushed by to the westward.

For six hours the steamship skirted the southern edge of this great ice field, and it was noon before she passed the western edge. Captain Knapp had taken care to keep a distance of nearly a mile to the south most of the time. He thought the field extended fully 100 miles east and west. It was drifting to the southward across the Atlantic steamer lands.

Other bergs looked like solid business block with square tops and precipitous sides. The temperature had fallen fully 25 degrees, and the passengers on deck wore their warmest wraps, but still shivered in the cold, in spite of the bright sun.

At 10 a. m. the Augusta Victoria passed within 500 yards of a large berg, which floated a little to the south of the field. This berg was seventy-five feet high and 500 feet long. The top was like a vast jagged plateau and a wave of cold air swept over the steamship as she rushed by to the westward.

For six hours the steamship skirted the southern edge of this great ice field, and it was noon before she passed the western edge. Captain Knapp had taken care to keep a distance of nearly a mile to the south most of the time. He thought the field extended fully 100 miles east and west. It was drifting to the southward across the Atlantic steamer lands.

Other bergs looked like solid business block with square tops and precipitous sides. The temperature had fallen fully 25 degrees, and the passengers on deck wore their warmest wraps, but still shivered in the cold, in spite of the bright sun.

At 10 a. m. the Augusta Victoria passed within 500 yards of a large berg, which floated a little to the south of the field. This berg was seventy-five feet high and 500 feet long. The top was like a vast jagged plateau and a wave of cold air swept over the steamship as she rushed by to the westward.

For six hours the steamship skirted the southern edge of this great ice field, and it was noon before she passed the western edge. Captain Knapp had taken care to keep a distance of nearly a mile to the south most of the time. He thought the field extended fully 100 miles east and west. It was drifting to the southward across the Atlantic steamer lands.

Other bergs looked like solid business block with square tops and precipitous sides. The temperature had fallen fully 25 degrees, and the passengers on deck wore their warmest wraps, but still shivered in the cold, in spite of the bright sun.

At 10 a. m. the Augusta Victoria passed within 500 yards of a large berg, which floated a little to the south of the field. This berg was seventy-five feet high and 500 feet long. The top was like a vast jagged plateau and a wave of cold air swept over the steamship as she rushed by to the westward.

For six hours the steamship skirted the southern edge of this great ice field, and it was noon before she passed the western edge. Captain Knapp had taken care to keep a distance of nearly a mile to the south most of the time. He thought the field extended fully 100 miles east and west. It was drifting to the southward across the Atlantic steamer lands.

Other bergs looked like solid business block with square tops and precipitous sides. The temperature had fallen fully 25 degrees, and the passengers on deck wore their warmest wraps, but still shivered in the cold, in spite of the bright sun.

At 10 a. m. the Augusta Victoria passed within 500 yards of a large berg, which floated a little to the south of the field. This berg was seventy-five feet high and 500 feet long. The top was like a vast jagged plateau and a wave of cold air swept over the steamship as she rushed by to the westward.

For six hours the steamship skirted the southern edge of this great ice field, and it was noon before she passed the western edge. Captain Knapp had taken care to keep a distance of nearly a mile to the south most of the time. He thought the field extended fully 100 miles east and west. It was drifting to the southward across the Atlantic steamer lands.

SPAIN IS SCANDALIZED.

Scrutiny of the Election Returns in Madrid Shows a Most Infamous Falsification of the Results.

Madrid, April 17.—Yesterday's scrutiny of the election returns showed that in Madrid out of 119,000, and of these 55,000 votes, 35,000 were given to the conservative candidate.

This is the best proof of the falsification of the election returns, because never more than 60 per cent. of the electorate have voted, even at elections characterized by great popular excitement, and the candidates were popular.

A petition asking that the elections in Madrid be annulled is now being prepared, and will be signed next week, when it is certain thousands of signatures will be appended, including the best-known names in Spain.

Telegrams from Bilbao show that in Valencian district, 81,000 votes were expended in the Guernica district. In the Marquina district the candidates spent $200,000.

In short, the public scandal created by these facts is enormous.

The definite result of the elections, according to official information, is:

Conservatives.....303
Liberals.....102
Independents.....10
Dissident Conservatives under Senor S.....8
Mild R. publicans of the Castelar shade.....3
Catholics.....1

Men's Spring Suits.

New Plaids and Overplaids, Checks and neat effects, 3 or 4 Button Sack Suits, $10.00 & $12.00

Our business increasing. Our stores crowded. It takes much thinking and planning to give such money's worth. But we do it. One price, square dealing. Money back for the asking.

Why not try the rising Clothing House of the city? Open Until 9 P. M. To-Night.

Brill Brothers Outfitters to Men.

Three 279 BROADWAY, 47 CORTLANDT ST. Store 211 SIXTH AVE.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c.

PERSONAL.

GOUT AND RHEUMATISM cured without fail. Dr. Packman's Remedy. Red Salve, discovered by Bohemia 40 years ago, is now imported and sold by J. L. Morgan & Co., 234 3d Ave., between 27th and 28th sts.

MRS. CHARLES AUGUSTINE RYAN, phone 222, commiserate with T. J. Purdy, Vanderbilt Hotel.

STORIES.

BROOKLYN STORES. Broadway & Bedford Ave. 60th, 31st St. BROOKLYN STORES. Broadway & Bedford Ave. 60th, 31st St.

So many good things we'd like to tell about to-day.

An all-wool, black or blue, Cheviot Suit, half lined with silk, for $15, is one of them.

A very smart Top Coat, without any lining at all, is another.

A very natty line of Little Boys' Wash Suits—$1.50 to $5—is another.

An excellent Derby for $3 is another.

A good pair of Patent Leathers for $2.40 (formerly $4) is another.

A splendid all-Madras Shirt for $1.50 is another.

And "there are others."

Headquarters for Bicycle Outfits, Cycling and Stable Suits, Proper Styles. Negligee Shirts, Special, $1.50. Undersuit to fit all shapes, $1 and up. Prompt attention to out-of-town orders.

Open Saturday evenings.

AN UP TO DATE STYLE The Jewels $300 GUARANTEED HAT.

TWO STORES: 100 Broadway, near Cortlandt st. 1227 Broadway, between 29th and 31st sts.

EXCURSIONS. PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD CO. PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOURS. WASHINGTON, APRIL 23 AND MAY 14, EACH COVERING A PERIOD OF THREE DAYS.

RATE, including transportation, two days' accommodation at the leading hotels of Washington and meals en route in both directions, $14.50. $14.50. Descriptive pamphlet at 1100 Broadway. FISHING HARKS—Sunday's sailing very good on Angler. A. Foster will run Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday hereafter. East 21st st., 1118; Battery, 5; 31st St.

It is an open Secret that the one reason why our Business Suits have qualities peculiarly their own is because of the careful way in which they are finished, 10, 12, 14, 15, 18, 20, 22, 24, 28 dollars.

Applies to our Bicycle Suits as well 7.50, 8, 10, 12, 15 dollars. Caps of the same goods 50c., 75c., $1.

HACKETT, CARHART & CO., Corner Broadway and Canal Street, also, 205-7 Broadway, below Chambers, Open this Evening.

SOCIETY OF TAMMANY, OR COLUMBIAN ORDER.

ANNUAL ELECTION. BROTHERS: You are respectfully requested to attend the annual meeting of the society for the election of officers and officers in the Council Chamber of the Grand Wagon, on Monday Evening, April 20, 1896, at half an hour after the setting of the sun. By order of the Grand Sachem, JOHN B. MCGOLDRICK, Secretary.

Manhattan, Season of Pleasures, 4th moon: Year of Discovery, 40th; of Independence, 129th, and of the institution, the 107th.

Use Dr. Tobias' Venetian Liniment if you are suffering from Chronic Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pains in the Limbs, Back or Chest, Sore Throat, Colds, Stiffened Joints or Contracted Muscles. Warranted for over forty years to give perfect satisfaction or the money refunded.

A bottle has never yet been returned. Sold by all druggists. Price 25c and 50c.

RELIGIOUS NOTICES.

AT REFORMED CATHOLIC SERVICES, in Masses 1 mile, 6th Ave. and 2nd St. East 20th St. 7:45. Father O'Connor introduces Father Kolman, a distinguished Roman Catholic priest, and one of the most distinguished of the National Committee and leader of the "New Movement" of the Roman Church, who delivers an important address on the subject of "Catholics and Catholics" invited. Admission free.

A MEETING for the presentation of spiritual facts and phenomena in hand at 9:30 p. m. near 5th Ave. Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock; permanent psychic always present; payment of 10 c. and 5 c. in advance. Van Brocklin, chairman.

ANOTHER "Pleasant Evening" at St. Bartholomew's Mission